Surrendered—Their Grub Was Very Bad.

Nashville, Tenn., September 13.—(Special.)—The meeting of convicts at Trane City has ended without a shot being fired. The fifty-three subordinates surrendered to day to Warden Dyer and two guards, and the only thing that remains to be done is the punishment of the offenders which will be severe. Warden Dyer was away yesterday but returned today, and at daylight seized a gun and with two guards advanced into the mine. He soon ran up on Jim Goodrich and Charles Holt, two of the leaders, and demanded that they lead the men out of the mines. After a few words they retired and soon came back

The leaders of the mutiny will be punished severely, probably by the use of the strap.

DEATH OF EX-GOVERNOR AMES.

He Was Found Dead in His Stateroom on the Steamer Pilgrim.

New York, September 13.—Frederick L. Ames, vice president of the Old Colony Railroad Company, and a millionaire, was found dead in his bed this morning in a stateroom of the steamer Illiamoon soon after its departure.

Mr. Ames lived in Boston and he left there last evening for this city, it having been his intention to attend a meeting of the Union Pacific railway directors today. About 9:30 o'clock this morning a steward knocked at the door, but received no answer, and after repeating the knocks, he notified the captain who had the door forced in. Mr. Ames was found dead. He had died some time during the night. Deputy Coroner Conway was notified and visited the boat, but up to 1 o'clock he had not made any further investigation.

OSBORN ARRESTED.

His Mass Meeting Last Night Comes to a Sudden End.

THE POLICE CUT HIM SHORT

He Determines to Speak in Spite of Orders, and Lands in a Cell at the Police Station.

The announcement made yesterday through hand bills and other mediums that Mr. J. H. Osborn would address a meeting at the artesian well that evening was the first indication that there had been any controversy on the subject.

The fact was that on Monday Mr. Osborn had sent the mayor a letter stating his intention of holding this meeting, and after a conference of the authorities, the following reply was made:

Mr. J. H. Osborn, City-Desk Sir: I am sorry that you will not be permitted to address a meeting at the artesian well on Wednesday night. If you intend having a meeting you must hold the same in some hall, as the streets of the city is not the place to hold such meetings. If you will notify me I will send policemen there to keep order. Very truly yours, A. B. CONNELLY, Chief of Police.

Nothing further was heard until the hand bill appeared. Thus the assurance that Osborn would speak excited a great deal of interest that the announcement under any other circumstances would never have received. People of all classes were curious to know whether he would have the temerity to make good his promise, and if so, what action the authorities would take.

The crowd gathered. The time set for the meeting was 7:30 o'clock, and long before that hour a crowd began to assemble about the well. By 7:15 it numbered at least five or six hundred, and pretty well filled the adjoining open space. It was a heterogeneous gathering which it would have been folly to term representative of the laboring classes. Workmen, in fact, were decidedly in the minority, the bulk of those present being merchants, clerks and men about town who were there to see what would happen and very decidedly out of touch with the occasion. The current talk among these spectators was derogatory of the meeting, but directly in front of the well there was a little knot of fifty or seventy-five who had been invited by police interference and were there to see what would happen and very decidedly out of touch with the occasion. The current talk among these spectators was derogatory of the meeting, but directly in front of the well there was a little knot of fifty or seventy-five who had been invited by police interference and were there to see what would happen and very decidedly out of touch with the occasion.

A casual spectator viewing the scene at this juncture would have been positive that the police were quickly ignoring it. The white glare of the air lamps overhead fell here and there upon a policeman's helmet, but a few officers at this public crossing are no unusual sight at any hour. There was no ostentatious display of force, no massing of men, nothing in short to indicate that anything out of the ordinary was in train.

The police department, nevertheless, was not asleep. In the comparatively dark street, where they could see without being seen, Sergeant Osborn, who has charge of this district and has been most of his life in the police, was stationed that they could reach the well in a few seconds at the first alarm. Mingling with the crowd were most of the detective force and such officers as were detailed to duty in plain clothes, and the station house preparations were more obvious. Twelve patrolmen were held in reserve and the mounted squad did not go on duty but remained ready to leap into the saddle at the word.

All this was in pursuance to the programme arranged by Chief Connelly—and it was and admirable it turned out to be. His plan was to be forewarned at every point but to avoid entirely the display of force.

The steel claws of the law were sheathed, but none the less prepared to strike.

As the illuminated clock in the Venable building marked half-past 7, there was a stir in the crowd and the tall form of Chief Connelly, accompanied by Captain Thompson and Chief of Detectives Wright, was seen pushing towards the artesian well. The three officers stopped within three feet of the structure and waited.

It was fully ten minutes later when Osborn suddenly appeared inside the railing. He had climbed up on the Peachtree side, and holding his hat in his hand, stepped briskly forward to the iron rail. Very few in the crowd seemed to know him, even by sight, and there was no cheering. Even he could speak Chief Connelly swung himself up the stone parapet and stood by his side. The two men shook hands.

They became Acquainted. "Mr. Osborn, I believe?" said the chief. "Yes sir."

"Do you intend to speak tonight?" "Yes sir."

"Well, sir, I am instructed by the mayor to stop you."

Up to this point the colloquy was conducted in a very low tone, barely being heard half a dozen feet away, but Osborn turned towards the crowd and said in a loud voice:

"I can't help it. If you want to arrest me, go ahead; I shall try to speak."

But there were no cheers; the crowd was waiting in simple curiosity for developments. The chief made no reply but leaned against the rail.

The situation was a dramatic one. The crowd stood breathless, with upturned, poor faces, waiting the next move. On the other side of the contrast between the two sides was a curious marked. Counting a boy. He wore a rusty black alpaca coat, planned at the throat and showing men. His arms hung by his side and he did not speak again for several minutes, and then he spoke to calm himself.

"Friends and fellow citizens," he finally said, "I propose to address you tonight on some of the religious aspects of the labor question. The labor question—"

That was the end.

WILL THE CONNELL OF WEST END HAS DECIDED TO Leave the Question to a Vote.

THE DAY OF THE ELECTION IS FIXED

And After the Vote Is Taken the Suburb Will Be a Part of Atlanta on the Basis of the Agreement.

West End will come into Atlanta.

And the people of that delightful suburb are anxious for the day to dawn when they will be a part of the city.

The last link in the chain of annexation was welded by the members of the West End council last night, and the chain, when complete, will be strong and hard enough to hold the two corporations in one embrace.

Mayor Nolans was in the chair when the West End council met last night, and it was he who called upon the clerk of the council to read the communication from the Atlanta council.

The Atlanta council last Monday night passed a resolution that the West End council should meet Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the Atlanta council chamber, and as the clerk finished reading it one of the members of the West End council arose and assured his associates that nearly every member of the Atlanta council had given his assurance that the work which the West End people wanted would be done during the years 1894 and 1895.

It was upon this point that the members of the West End council seemed to halt. They all appeared anxious to know whether or not they would be given such a way as not to endanger the public. You cannot use the streets. But I do not desire to put you to any trouble, and I will not promise you that I will not repeat this. I will not make a case against you.

"I stand on my rights under the constitution," he replied, "and have a right to speak where I please."

"If release you now do you intend to go back and make a speech?"

"I cannot repeat this question."

"Will you promise me not to?"

"No sir. I will speak when I want to."

The chief thereupon ordered a charge of obstructing the streets upon the docket. The matter of giving bail was then discussed. Attorney Barnes, who claimed to have been engaged by the West End council, insisted on bail being fixed at once, but to his evident chagrin Osborn repudiated his friendly office and said he didn't care for his services. The matter was then put in an appearance as his attorney and held a hurried conference with the agitator.

"We will not give bail," he said at length, "you must get bail for yourself."

"I will not give bail," he said at length, "you must get bail for yourself."

FINANCE AND TRADE.

CONSTITUTION OFFICE.

Atlanta, September 13, 1893.

The recent awakening and activity in the industry of trade publishing is one of the fruits of the money troubles. The country has been wrestling with this year. The bright geniuses who follow the profession of looking trains are close students of affairs and are always quick to scent a chance for making a big business of money from New York.

Banking men were quick to attribute the unusual activity among the robbers to the huge shipments of money between New York and nearly every city of any size or importance in the country. For weeks the money has been going out of New York, and the train robbers, who are all well-posted men, knew of this. The big robbery up in Indiana two days ago was aimed at a big shipment of money from New York.

Just at this time money is being shipped away from New York to the other side of the situation of a few weeks ago. Up to a few days past the Atlanta banks have been shipping daily big sums of money to New York to make New York exchange. Thousands of dollars were sent from Atlanta in this way. But now the bankers say the money is coming this way.

According to the financiers, great loads of money are carried daily from New York to Chicago and to other western cities. Only a few days ago it was reported that New York decided to let go of its grip on the money they had been hoarding up, and then every train that left New York carried its precious burden.

As stated above New York reaped a golden harvest from the money troubles. Only a few days ago it was reported that New York decided to let go of its grip on the money they had been hoarding up, and then every train that left New York carried its precious burden.

We are getting the money from New York. "It is coming out of New York," says the marking of the cotton crop. Every year between August 30th and September 30th, there is a big movement of money southward. It is necessary that it come here for cotton purposes.

The banks composing the Atlanta Clearing House Association have agreed to a schedule of prices for collecting checks and drafts drawn on points outside of Atlanta, except New York. The schedule is as follows:

On each item from $25, a charge of 10 cents; on each item from $25 up to $50, a charge of 15 cents; on each item from $50 up to $100, a charge of 25 cents; on each item from $100 up to $1,000, one-fourth of one per cent; on items upward of $1,000, a charge of one-eighth of one per cent.

All out of the money on deposit will be grouped and charged as one amount when it exceeds $100.

GETS THE REWARD.

Jerry Morris Arrested the Right Man,
but He Died in Jail.
ALICE WILL STAY AT HEARDMONT

Governor Northen Pardoned One Convict and Refused Two Applications—Capitol News.

In an order he issued yesterday deciding that a reward of $200 should be paid to Jerry Morris, of Washington county,
Governor Northen decided an unique case,
and that decision recalls an interesting story.

On the 21st of May, whitecaps visited the house of James Lawrence in Washington county. There were seven men in the party, they were masked, and they went there as was afterward confessed, for the purpose of beating Lawrence.

But Lawrence didn't submit without resistance. In fact, so strong a fight did he put up that it was necessary to save their lives that some of the mob should shoot Lawrence. There was no time for parley, he was shot dead.

Three days later the governor issued a reward of $200 for the arrest, with proof
to convict, of each of the murderers of Lawrence.

The next day Jerry M. Morris arrested
William Downs, charging that he was one of Lawrence's murderers. It seems that Downs was a desperado and the sheriff
could not get a deputy who would tackle
him. The fact that he had just received a gunshot or pistol wound in the shoulder,
and the further fact that the white caps
were traced to his house led to his being suspected.

Downs was placed in jail and afterward died from the effects of the wound in his shoulder. But before he died he confessed to being one of the party of white caps.
He stated that J. M. Rogers had fired one of the shots that killed Lawrence and at the same time had accidentally shot him, Downs.

Morris made claim to the reward. Now,
the rule in cases of rewards which provide for "evidence sufficient to convict" is that the party arrested must be actually convicted and the supreme court must have passed on the case so there can be no doubt that the right person has been caught. Morris claimed that the confession of Downs was all sufficient and Governor Northen, after a careful consideration of the legal points
involved, decided in his favor.

One pardon granted, two refused. That was yesterday's record.

The man who drew the prize this time was S. K. Johnson, of Hall county. In 1891, Johnson was convicted of forgery and received a four years' sentence. The petition in his behalf was based on the fact of his good behavior in the penitentiary during the two years that he has served and the statement that his health is such that he cannot live to serve out his sentence. The judge, solicitor general and the request for the pardon, each stating that in his opinion the punishment he has received has been sufficient.

THEY WILL ENTER THE UNIVERSITY.

Atlanta Will Send Over Her Usual Delegation
This Year.

A number of bright Atlanta boys will enter the university this fall.

The season begins next Wednesday, and in view of that fact, the boys are now busy with their preparations. It is customary with those who have already spent a year in the university to go over in advance of the new men, and arrange the trap for catching the unwary freshman.

Atlanta never fails to do her part by this old and honored institution. This year the number of students who will matriculate for the first time is unusually large, and is made up of many of the brightest boys in the city.

The majority of the boys will leave Atlanta
next Saturday morning.

Among those who will gamble on the green
sward during the coming year are: Messrs.
Alex W. Stephens, W. R. Armstrong, Hey-
ward Hansell, George Hurt, Frank K. Boland, Will Draper, Bob Draper, the Tidwell boys, Shirley Brooks, Paul L. Fleming, Ed. Dougherty, Henry Porter, Frank Carter, Harry Alexander, Douce Bradwell and Frank L.
Fleming. Mr. Frank Bonn, of Washington,
Ga., who was the guest of Mr. Alex Stephens will also enter the university this fall.

The outlook for the college this year is unusually promising, and from the present indications there will be as many as 250
students enrolled. Athletics it is thought, will meet with the approval of the faculty and the resident trustees, and this will insure a much larger attendance after the Christmas holidays.

Atlanta is proud of the young men who go over to illustrate her this year, and she expects them to bring back their blushing honors thick upon them. The records of the college have always placed the Atlanta men in the lead, and this is due to the excellent work of the public schools of the city.

Without getting off the track, it is pertinent to say that no city in the United States is better equipped with a system of public instruction than Atlanta. The boys who graduate from the high school have a decided advantage over all the other boys in the state, and the close of the year never fails to award them the blue ribbon.

The campus will begin to take on new life
next week, and the old oak trees that have witnessed the summer will begin to shake off their drowsiness and to laugh outright with the peals of laughter that will rend their boughs.

Chancellor Doggs is now in Washington
city, but will reach Athens during the latter part of the present week.

FROM THE FAR WEST.
The body of Mr. A. C. Ladd reached the City yesterday morning.

The funeral of Mr. A. C. Ladd will occur
from the undertaking parlors of Barclay,
Foster & Brandon this morning at 10 o'clock.
Mr. Ladd, it will be remembered, died on the Pacific coast about three weeks ago. His object in going west was to find a remedy for the bracing atmosphere of that climate for his wasted and broken constitution, but instead of improving, his health began to steadily decline until the sad announcement reached Atlanta that he was dead.

It was at first decided to bury him in the far west but after the wishes of the family were consulted it was arranged that his body should be brought to Atlanta, his old home, for interment.
